WOMAN MADE OF FIRE

Margarete Bagshaw 1964 - 2015

Margarete was the third generation of the only three generational female painting dynasty known in recorded history. Her grandmother, Pablita Velarde was the first Indian woman to do art as a full time career in this country. Her mother, Helen Hardin was part of a small group of Native artists who changed Indian art from traditional to modern contemporary, in the 1970’s. Margarete did not identify herself as an Indian artist, and when asked, firmly stated “I am a Modernist who happens to have some Native ancestry.”

Painting full time in Santa Fe, New Mexico, from 2009 until December 2015, Margarete was truly a master painter during her all too short life. In the last five years of her life she painted 210 oil paintings - some as large as 7” by 10”. Her use of color was second to no one. Her work compares to the great mid century modernists, in terms of color and composition. Her work is on display in museums around the country and in private collections around the world.

Margarete will likely go down in history as the modernist of her era.
